Class of '33 reunites in Appomattox

The Class of 1933

Out of a class of 32, 18 were present when the Appomattox High School Class of 1933 held their 50th reunion on August 6 at the Masonic Building in Appomattox.

An oil lamp burned brightly on a table as a reminder of how many of the students studied 50 years ago. A reminder, too, of bygone days, was an old fashioned flat iron used by one of the class members, Anne O'Brien Davis.

"We were depression children", commented Louise Lewis Martin, (Mrs. E. Carter Martin), "in fact the school board ran out of money and we had to graduate on May 18, rather than continue through until the June 1 planned closing date."

"I remember too," she continued, "we went down to my father's farm to pick wild daisies to decorate the stage for Class Day. We made daisy chains and everything looked beautiful."

Linwood Paulette, class president was master of ceremonies.

Herbert Abbitt was in charge of the Memorial Service honoring the deceased members of the class, Hilda Abbitt, Mable Staples, Lucille Heims, Dorothy Steele, Mary Anderson, Ruby Cole, James Ford and Eugene Richardson.

Class members were Hilda Abbitt, Nellie Turnes, Verna Paris, Mable Staples, Thelma Morris, Ida Mae Meburin, Lucile Heims, Elizabeth Cralle, Dorothy Steele, Mary Smith, Anne O'Brien, Louise Lewis, Helen Evans, Mary Anderson, Lillian Davidson, Lois Banton, Ruby Cole, Madeline Ferguson, Frances Marshall, Dorothy Tweedy, Katherine Davidson, Evelyn Brown, Mabelle Smith, Verna Kern, Lynwood Paulette, Herbert Abbitt, Newton Jennings, Kermit Paulette, Eugene Richardson, Thomas Taylor, Lawrence Moore and James Ford.

A presentation of awards was made by Anne O'Brien Davis.

Newton Jennings gave the invocation before the group and their guests enjoyed dinner prepared by the women of the Eastern Star, A time of fellowship and reminiscing followed.

Plans were made for the Class of 1933 to meet next August for their 51st reunion.

THE APPOMATTOX HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1933 was represented by 18 of the 32 members at recent reunion. William Dudley takes position at new industry

William C. Dudley III

William C. Dudley III, Page County public schools' job placement counselor since the program's inception in 1977, has resigned to accept a position with a new county industry.

The resignation, accepted by the Page County School Board at its meeting Monday night, is effective Aug. 31.

Dudley, 32, will become director of administration for Autometrics Inc. at its new plant near Stanley. The firm manufactures electronic componenets.

In his new position, he will be in charge of all personnel and direct the plant's purchasing and budget operations. He also will serve as a liaison with other corporate units of Autometrics and direct the plant's public relations and employee training programs.

During his time as job placement couselor, Dudley has directed several federally funded programs, including a Summer Youth Employment program, which have added $1.4 million to the county economy.

The county's job placement program has been used as a model for other school systems in the state.

A native of Appomattox, Dudley received BS and MS degrees in vocational education from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. He has completed additional graduate work at the University of Virginia and James Madison University.

He was a vocational counselor in the Montgomery County Alternate Route to School (ARTS) program for three years and taught two years at Christiansburg Middle School before coming to Luray High School as a vocational agriculture instructor in 1976.

Dudley served as chairman of the Area 7 Manpower Planning Council and member of the State Manpower Planning Council. He also was a member of the Balance of State Planning Council of the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program.

He is a member of the Luray Rotary Club and vice president of the Luray Little League. He is board member of Shen-Paco Industries and the Rural Festival Theater Company. He serves on the vestry of Christ Episcopal Church in Luray, where he was formerly junior warden.

He and his wife, the former Linda Martin of Appomattox, a Luray Elementary School teacher, have a son, William IV, 12.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Dudley of Pamplin.

Work benefits noted

Part-time work and volunteer assignments are a way to learn about career fields and gain experience, said Marilyn G. Newman, Virginia Cooperative Extension agent in Stafford County.

"After graduation from high school, teenagers often find that many employers consider experience to be as important as good grade or extracurricular activities," Ms. Newman said.

She offered some advice on how to look for some extra work or a part-time job that would be meaningful.

Jobs often come from unexpected sources, so it's important to get as many leads about jobs as possible and follow-up on all of them.

A good way to find leads is to look through the "help wanted" section of the newspaper. Many employers place ads for part-time help. Ask friends and relatives about jobs they might know of.

Another important way is to advertise yourself and your abili-

MCV planning 'Hospitality House'

Family members of out-of-town patients at the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals of Virginia Commonwealth University will have fewer worries during their stay in Richmond when the MCV Hospital Auxiliary implements its plan to provide a Hospitality House near the hospitals.

The auxiliary on July 21 received the approval of the VCU Board of Visitors to establish a facility to meet the needs of family members of MCV patients from beyond a 30-mile radius of Richmond. The auxiliary has formed a subsidiary corporation to renovate and maintain a house which will offer lodging and supportive companionship in a home-like atmosphere. Plans call for the house to open by Christmas, 1984.

Relatives of out-of-town patients frequently face the worry of finding lodging and food in a strange city while experiencing anxiety about the patient. At the auxiliary's Hospitality House such individuals will find free lodging, a place to cook a meal, do laundry, shower, or just relax for a while. The house, which will accomodate 30 people, can also provide another, less tangible need of family members; the chance to talk with others facing similar situation.

The Hospitality House, a double house, will be located at 1006-1008 E. Marshall St., one block from MCV's new Main Hospital. The structure known as the Zeigler House, is in need of approximately $250,000 worth of renovation to function as a hospitality house. The auxiliary is seeking donations of money and materials from businesses, church and civic groups, and private individuals.

The CSX Corporation of Richmond has already pledged a $50,000 donation to the auxiliary for the renovation work. The group has also been given $3,000 by the hospital gift shop.

The auxiliary has undertaken this major project because it feels there is a great need for such a facility, according to Jackie Nichols, president of the MCV-VCU Hospital Hospitality House, Inc. The specialized care available at MCV brings in many referrals from all over Virginia, other states, and even foreign countries. In 1982, 30 percent of the 275,412 patient days accounted for at MCV are attributed to patients who traveled more than 30 miles for care. Fifteen percent of those traveled more than 60 miles, with an average length of stay of 17 days, compared to 8 days for local patients.

The operation of the house will be patterned after similar facilities in Nashville, Tenn., the first hospitality house which was established in 1974, and seven other houses operating in the country at this time.

Renovation plans for the Zeigler House, built in 1870, include a sitting room, family-style kitchen, an office, a "quiet room," an efficiency apartment for a resident manager, a half-bath and laundry facilities on the first floor. The second and third floors will each have four bedrooms and four full bathrooms. Additional laundry facilities are planned for the third floor.

An executive director will be present during the day and a resident manager on duty each night and on weekends. Guests will be referred by the hospital's chaplains' office, social services department and volunteer services department.

Persons who would like more information about the hospitality House should contact the MCV Volunteer Services department at (804) 786-0923.

ties. Prepare a notice stating what you can do and post it in the community bulletin boards. Many supermarkets, laundromats, and stores have a place where such notices can be put up.

"Make sure you get permission from the store's manager to put it up," said Ms. Newman who has participated in National 4-H Career Workshops. She added that the notice should contain what you are willing to do, and your name and a telephone number where you can be reached easily.

The best advice is to keep looking, Ms. Newman said. Don't let the first refusal stop you from continuing to follow every lead you can until you find a job.
